ROAD MAP TO OUR NURSERIES

WITH a deep sense of appreciation, we dedicate to you, our friends, this 25th Anniversary Catalog.

As we look back over these years and receive the friendly greetings and expressions of satisfaction from those whom it has been our pleasure and privilege to serve, we feel reassured that our policy of offering only dependable stock of the highest quality at reasonable prices is amply endorsed.

Each year we offer new and rare varieties—but not until they have been thoroughly tested in our own Nursery and proved hardy and desirable. On the other hand, we are continually discarding those varieties which have developed undesirable traits. Growing the finest quality Nursery Stock is the first consideration of our organization.

This Anniversary we are offering our friends a few choice collections of hardy, desirable trees, shrubs, and perennials at special Anniversary prices. We emphasize that these varieties offered are highest quality stock and in no sense an inferior grade.

Visit us! Let us show you our fine healthy collection of nursery-grown stock. You will receive a genuine old-fashioned welcome.

Ornamental Trees

THE shade trees of the Summer time, the flowering trees, and the richly hued trees of the Autumn are in this group.

These trees possess luxuriant foliage, in response, it seems, to Nature's urge to do her utmost while she may. For this is the group which sheds its leaves in the Fall.

But—there is beauty, too, in the fine traceries of bare limbs against a winter sky.

Ornamental trees are best planted in the Spring when the frost has left the ground, or in the Autumn when the leaves have turned, before the ground has frozen.

Rock Gardens

THE art of Rock Gardening is a special cult. It is the extreme in gardening and difficult. Special knowledge is needed both for constructing the garden and for choosing the plants to inhabit it. Yet, the fact that Rock Gardening is tremendously popular, proves that the game is not only fascinating but usually successful.

The garden will suggest the barren crags or lofty mountain tops, and you will plant, in carefully prepared crevices, all the delightful flora of Patagonia, Oregon, Finland, Japan, and the Alps.

If you are fortunate in having a place that is partially or completely shaded, you may build instead a Woodland Rock Garden. This is less difficult of achievement, and offers a much greater selection in plants certain to thrive. It will imitate the rocky, woodland areas harboring such plants as English Primrose and the Maidenhair Fern.

If possible, avoid any formality in constructing your Rock Garden. The arrangement must depend somewhat upon existing conditions, and the area to be used. Should you not have a proper background, this may be overcome by the use of trees, flowering shrubs, and a few evergreens. To make it still more interesting, a small Fountain or Bird Bath may be placed near the shade of the shrubs, and this will make an inviting place for the birds.

Rock plants, with few exceptions, are deep rooted and should have an ample supply of prepared soil, with provision for good drainage. Plants should be chosen which blossom at different intervals so as to prolong the blooming season. To make a proper mass, it is better to have not less than three plants of each variety.

Select rocks not less than one foot in diameter,—two feet is better,—rather broad in appearance. Use few, if any, small ones as they tend to produce an artificial effect. Place your rocks so you will have pockets of soil for the roots to penetrate, leaving room between them for the plants to grow and spread.

In this Guide we have marked with the letter (R) those plants suitable for Rock Gardens. We will gladly send selected lists to those interested in plants for special conditions, such as moist, shady, and dry hot places.

Suggestions for Constructing a Small Rock Garden Similar to Our Plan

1. Assemble forty-five or fifty weathered rocks for the finished surface, and about twenty to be used in the foundation.
2. Prepare a mixture of four yards each of sharp sand, garden soil, and vegetable fibre. This should be thoroughly mixed together.
3. Place the foundation rocks in the center of the area to be used, leaving spaces between rocks of about one foot, and cover with the soil mixture.
4. Now place additional rocks on this area, separating, covering, and filling in between as before.
5. Ram the soil firmly between each rock as you proceed.
6. Continue as above until you have finally used the weathered rock for the finish, leaving exposed from one-third to one-half of rock surface.

Evergreens

DESERVEDLY, the use of evergreens for landscape effect is growing enormously, for they are year-round friends. There are low lying dwarf forms, conical varieties of all sizes, and tall, stately, columnar types, varying in color from sombre shades of green and gold to fresh gray-greens and deep blue-greens.

This year we can offer you the finest growth we have had in our history, trees that will respond to your plans for a formal or naturalistic planting.

They ask one thing in return, that they be planted in a decidedly acid soil. We can help you make sure of this.

The A B C's of Planting

1. Locate plants by setting stakes in the ground. It's easier to move a stake than a plant.
2. Spade, turning sod under, and pulverize area to be planted to a depth of at least twelve inches.
3. Dig holes one foot broader than the spread of the roots, and from two to four inches deeper than they were planted in the nursery.
4. Set the plant in the hole one inch deeper than it was in the nursery. This can be determined by the "collar" just above the roots.
5. Fill in with pulverized soil, shaking the plant gently up and down during the operation to sift the soil around the roots.
6. Firm the soil two or three times while filling in to exclude all air.
7. Leave the last inch of soil loose to act as a dust mulch. Do not make a mound of soil around the plant.
8. Water until the soil is thoroughly saturated to the bottom of the roots. Be sure. Dig down a short distance from your plants.
9. Top fertilize the soil once or twice a year. Never allow fertilizer or manure to come in direct contact with the roots.
10. Cultivate frequently to keep your plants growing vigorously.
11. Do not expose the roots to the sun or wind longer than is absolutely necessary.
12. Do not hurry with your planting. Take time to do it well. It pays to make your plants feel at home and happy.
